I have a startService() function and a stopService() function. Now, when I start the service for the first time, it's not running and the "stop" function is called, but when the service was started twice already, the "stop" function is not called. I think this is because the service itself is already running? What can I do to check if the service is already running? A: You can simply check the Exists property of the ServiceController class to check if the service is running. if (ServiceController.GetServices().Any()) { // Your service is running } else { // Your service is not running } A: You can use the Exists method. if (ServiceController.GetServices().Exists(servicename)) { // Service is running } else { // Service is not running } The Exists method is much faster than ServiceController.GetServices().Any() Cyclosporin A blocks activity-induced increase in sialylation of N-linked glycans in rat hepatocytes. In the present study, we investigated whether cyclosporin A, which is known to inhibit signal transduction cascades, affects glycans present on the N-linked oligosaccharide moieties of a group of proteins that are induced following serum deprivation in cultured rat hepatocytes. In the presence of cyclosporin A (10 micrograms/ml), the release of preformed and de novo-formed glycoconjugates into the culture medium of washed cells was not modified. In addition, treatment of the cells with cyclosporin A did not alter the levels of major metabolites of glycoconjugates in hepatocytes. However, cyclosporin A reduced the level of sialylated glycoconjugates
