We have investigated the brush structure of thermoresponsive nanoparticles formed by grafting copolymer poly(N-isopropylacrylamide) on the surface of silica nanoparticles with diameter of ~ 30 nm. Using $(1)H$ NMR techniques, we have measured the brush thickness as a function of temperature, and investigated its thermodynamic properties. The brush conformation and thickness are found to be strongly dependent on the grafting density and on the grafting monomer, and show a continuous transition from a collapsed brush at temperatures below the lower critical solution temperature of the grafting polymer to a swollen brush at temperatures above the LCST of the grafting polymer. We have studied the effect of the grafting density and of the grafting monomer on the thermodynamics of the brush conformation. The brush transition from collapsed to swollen can be described by the Flory-Huggins model for the temperature dependence of the brush thickness, while the effect of the grafting monomer is modeled by the free energy of the brush. Sin Tax Sin Tax are an electronic music group from Adelaide, Australia. Their style of music can be described as a combination of techno, electronica and alternative rock, with elements of classic rock and 80s pop. They have released five studio albums, and collaborated with many international and Australian artists including Ian Pooley, Miike Snow, Eyedea and Cypress Hill. History The group's origins start in the early days of Adelaide's music scene in the late 1990s, when members of hip hop and jungle influenced groups such as The Village People (Sandy Scratcher and Ben Latimer) got together to form the group Debs & Destroyers, which later changed its name to Sin Tax. In 2008 the group released their first album, Grandest Trip, on their own label, Sin Tax Music. The album was produced entirely by Alex Griffiths, and features guest appearances by Eyedea, Subroc, James Moody, Paul Brown and Noisia. The album received many positive reviews in Australian and international media. The band released their second album, Circus, in early 2010. Again produced by Griffiths, it featured guest appearances by Noisia, Micro
